

David Shipley

Reform's plan for mass deportations

We value your privacy

The Spectator and our 5403 technology partners ask you to consent to the use of cookies to store/access and process personal data on your device. This can include the use of unique identifiers and information about your browsing patterns to create the best possible user experience on this website. The following description outlines how your data may be used by us, or by our partners.

Store and/or access information on a device ▾

Personalised advertising and content, advertising and content measurement, audience research and services development ▾

Analytics Storage ▾

Some of our partners process personal data on the basis of legitimate interest. You can object to such processing at any time. Please click "manage cookies" below to view our list of partners and the purposes for which consent is required.

You can change your preferences at any time by using the Manage Cookies link at the bottom of the page.

Manage preferences

Essential cookies only

Accept all

(Photo: Getty)

 Text settings

 Comments

Share

After Zia Yusuf's announcement that Reform would create a 'UK Deportation Command' (UKDC), much of the media leapt to make comparisons with ICE in America. The Guardian described it as an 'ICE-style deportation plan', the Independent an 'ICE-style UK border agency', and even the Mail stated that 'Reform is planning to create a British version of Trump's ICE unit'. I spoke to Yusuf this morning, who was quick to dismiss these